City of North Vancouver Supports Healthy Families with New Youth Directory

November 26, 2015

The City of North Vancouver has launched an online North Shore Youth Directory. Youth in the City and across the North Shore now have a new service and resource tailored to their specific needs regarding health, relationships and mental health support.

The new directory NSYouth.ca is online and designed for youth in our community and tailored to their digital expectations. Optimized for smart phones and tablets, the directory provides contact, referral and event information, specifically for local youth. It was produced in collaboration with the Districts of North and West Vancouver.

“The North Shore Youth Directory is a first in our community and a customized resource for today’s youth,” says Mayor Darrell Mussatto. “By giving them the information they need in the format they want, we empower our youth to access help and resources quickly and confidentially. This initiative demonstrates the City’s ongoing commitment to youth in our community and supporting healthy families.”

The North Shore Youth Directory was introduced at the City’s recent ‘Kids in the Hall’ event celebrating healthy, happy families. The successful event also served as the launch of CNV4ME, the City’s innovative child, youth and family friendly strategy. http://www.cnv.org/CNV4ME

The North Shore Youth Directory is online at NSYouth.ca. As well, resource information cards have been distributed to locations throughout the City. http://www.cnv.org/YouthDirectoryPocketCard
